

Kushi Ladher

Hello everyone, I hope you're all well, my name is Kushi and I'm in 12H

So why do I believe I'm a suitable candidate for this role?

I would say that I'm easy to get along with, I'm good at communicating with others but I'm also willing to listen, especially if there is an important issue and I would like to say that I will most defiantly try my absolute best to help resolve that issue; even with suggestions that you may have like an end of year trip. I'm also very reliable on communication, which is important considering I'll be working alongside the junior leadership team but also the whole school. Being able to communicate with the younger years will mean that they feel open enough to share their concerns but also their opinions on what can be done to improve.

People may say that I'm open but truthful in a sense that I get my point across, which is understandable considering I'm honest in a way that's not problematic. I'm also very sociable and willing to talk but I would also say that I'm good at giving advice.

I personally don't believe in a perfect person which is why I would try my best to gain trust and be the best role model I aspire to be. Starting in year 7 and having no one to look up to for a long time really made me realise how much of an influence we have on the younger years but also to our peers. As head person I would make sure that everyone feels welcome no matter where you come from, we will also include LGBTQ+ awareness maybe working alongside the humankind group but also Black history month activities, we should acknowledge the diversity within our community and spread positivity and embrace our differences to then educate others. I would do my best to propose end of year trips, culture days/week, and fun ways of fund raising. However, I also feel that students should have more involvement when new teachers apply for roles at our school; I believe this is important as the students will then have to be in an environment with a teacher they feel comfortable with. Doing this will allow students to make decisions to benefit themselves but also their education with the guidance of Mr Spyropoulos.

I would say that I'm a very dependable person with great time management, I'm also always energetic and eager to learn new skills. I also have experience working in a group/team like when I did my Duke of Edinburgh award, it was incredibly challenging nonetheless we powered through it together.

As head student I would ensure students feel comfortable within the school environment. Also, I can ensure that I will do my absolute best to bring a positive change to Wixams academy. Now again I will always be willing to help whatever the situation may be.

Thank you so much for taking the time to read this I really appreciate it.
